FRANK GRASSO

Grand Hotel Djibloho - Equatorial Guinea

I have seen the best hotel in the world and I saw it in Equatorial Guinea, in the most real and fragrant Africa you can imagine. Making dreams come true for many is a mental exercise in itself, for others like Vincenzo Presti it is a hard daily job made of discipline, dedication and passion to leave the tourists of the world a testimony to collect, something to live and tell. My respect for those who create hotels, that is, the homes of travelers in the world, has always been maximum and when, as in this case, we talk about a wonder in Central Africa where a compatriot of ours has been working for years to give the world something special, eternal and sublime, then this respect is even greater. I thank Vincenzo Presti for making my stay, that of my family and that of my friends unique. I thank him even more for what he is doing in this part of the world, Africa that I adore and for this small and magnificent country that for a few days is no longer just an exotic name on a geographical map but an experience that has taken shape and substance. Equatorial Guinea is a magnificent country with much to offer, the only one in Africa where Spanish is spoken, a place to discover lakes, waterfalls, a fantastic sea, tropical forest, good food and friendly and kind inhabitants. Here everything smells of reality, there are no stage sets for the use and consumption of tourists, the truth in its “original” form.

Have a nice weekend

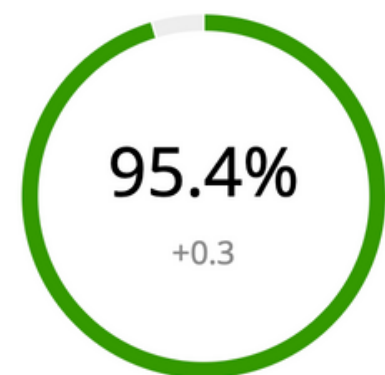

Sincerely Franco Grasso
